SOCIAL WORKER'S CORNER

According to healthychildren.org, if your child is missing many days of school, or a few days every single month, it's important to consider the reason for the absenteeism.

A nationwide study found that kids with ADHD, autism or developmental delays are twice as likely to be chronically absent compared to kids without these conditions.

Children with common chronic illnesses, such as asthma and type 1 diabetes, miss more school when they are having more symptoms.

Mental health conditions, like anxiety or depression, are common reasons for absences.

Up to 5% of children have school-related anxiety and may struggle to understand or explain why they refuse to attend school.

If you are in need of resources, please reach out to your school social worker or school counselor. Every student in the district has an identified school social worker and school guidance counselor.

PBIS FOCUS: RESPONSIBILITY

TAKE 100%
RESPONSIBILITY

When each one of us acts appropriately and independently, we collectively make our world a better place. Let's talk about responsible young adults. Arrive to class early with a positive attitude. Arrive to class early with your work complete and supplies in hand. Arrive to class early with the intention to participate and gain more knowledge. Arrive to class early with the mindset that you're already working on your career goals. Let's work on it, Heights.

Being responsible is all about you.
